WONDERFUL ROCK GARDEN.

Englishmen Has a Three Acre Repreduction of the Matterhorn.

The largest rock garden in England is that of Sir Frank Crisp at Friar Park, Henley. It is a faithful reproduction of the Matterhorn on a scale of about three acres, Seven thousand tons of limestone were brought from Yorkshire to make it.

The snow capped peak is represented by quartz. Below it are thousands upon thousands of alpine flowers growing in pockets between the rocks and filling every chink in the trails that ascend the mountain. There must be

200 different species in bloom at once. At the base of the mountain, says Country Life in America, is a minia-"Well, enny way, she said: 'Ben, I's ture Swiss chalet, where one may sit and enjoy the scene, comparing all the main features with a little bronze model of the Matternhorn which Sir Frank Missy Alice,' I says. And she says, had made for the entertainment of his guests. A brook courses down the mountain side, and just before it reaches the chalet it forms a pretty cascade and then spreads out at your feet into a ministure lake decorated with pygmy water iflies and richly

Harlem In New York. In an early charter of what is now New York occurs the name of Lancaster. That is what Harlem used to be called. It comprised the territory on Manhattan Island porth of a line drawn from the foot of East Seventy-fourth street to the foot of Manhattan street. The real Harlem village was a settlement collected within a radius of a quarter of a mile from One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street and Third avenue. Today the name Harlem is applied to the whole territory north of One Hundred and Tenth street, east and west. After the name Lancaster was eliminated the village was called Nieuw Haarlaem .- New York Press.
